Thesis: “Women Development and Budget for Women Employment – An Analytical Study with Special Reference to Nagpur District (1997–1998 to 2006–2007)”

Summary: This research focused on the annual financial statement containing estimated income expenditure details of the forthcoming financial year of the government of India which the president presents under Indian constitution article 112 as a budget. One important element of it is the preparation of the budget for the strengthening role of women empowerment. The most important factors in women's empowerment are the economy, social, political, health, education, etc. To study the changes occurred in per capital income and development of women from the point of allocations made for women's empowerment and growth. The research examined the role of budget allocation in promoting women's empowerment across economic, social, political, health, and educational spheres. It analyzed how financial planning impacts per capita income and women's overall development.
